Dear Prime Minister,

I am very concerned about possible changes to the medical assistance in dying (MAID) law.

Canadians living with disabilities and chronic illness, as well as other medically vulnerable people, already face significant challenges in getting the support they need to live. Removing safeguards from the MAID law puts these Canadians at even greater risk.

If any change is to be made, I urge you to propose MAID safeguards that are clearly stated, rigorous and strictly enforced. Please consider the Vulnerable Persons Standard suggestions for safeguards.

It is essential that the government vigorously defend the need for and importance of clear and specific safeguards that protect vulnerable Canadians from abuse and harm.

Also, please include meaningful conscience protection for healthcare workers in any proposed MAID legislation.

Sincerely,
